

manual^{cc}

Instructions for beginners and advanced players

OPEN CALL FOR ARTISTS:
Uqbar, Berlin

manual^{cc} is a Creative Commons license game - it can be replayed in any chosen configuration, in any place and at any time. According to the instructions made available in the exhibition space, the spectators themselves are capable of recreating the works, that is game variants, conceived by the artists. The participation of the spectators in the exhibition consists both in making and using the work.

Rules

- 1 The artist is supposed to send the instructions how to complete his work.
- 2 The instructions as a drawing or a handwritten text should be sent in A5 format to uqbar address.
- 3 The work should be feasible to make at no or minimal financial cost by the persons present with the use of easily accessible materials.
- 4 The work has to be a kind of game, which means it is to possess a 'playability' potential. It can be aimed both at one person and at a number of people.
- 5 The game can be realized multiple times and used, depending on its character, inside the gallery on special playing tables or outside in any public domain.
- 6 All the works are realized under the Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 2.5 licence, due to which the whole exhibition as well as its particular elements can be recreated for non-profit purposes in any time and at any place with no consent of the artists and curators required.
- 7 English, Polish or German are the languages of the instructions as long as this does not interfere with the inherent nature of the work.

manual^{cc} has begun as a project by a group of 12 curators realized within the framework of the Curatorial Studies at the Jagiellonian University in Cracow, Poland in conjunction with Kronika in Bytom. In September 2007 the project has been presented at Kronika accompanied by a book including over 80 artworks by Polish and international artists. A new edition in the form of an exhibition will take place at Centre for Contemporary Art Ujazdowski Castle, Warsaw, April 25th - May 18th, 2008.

If you have any further question please contact: projectspace@uqbar-ev.de Please note that the cards should reach uqbar until April 15th, 2008.
